The Cotswolds: Watercolours John Tookey, Christopher Hall

The timeless appeal of the Cotswolds is perfectly captured in this delightful picture book by water-colour artist, John Tookey, whose delicate touch exactly suits the gently rolling landscape. His pleasure in the golden limestone villages, soaring churches and winding country lanes captivate the eye whilst Christopher Hall, editor of The Countryman and resident of Burford, provides a lively commentary on the stately homes and gardens, market squares and historic sites - such as the ruins at Malmesbury and the standing stones at Rollright - which Tookey has taken as his subjects. Unspoilt, quintessentially English and within easy reach of London, the unique charm of the Cotswolds attracts great numbers of tourists who visit not only the countryside and villages but also the historic towns of Gloucester, Bath and Cheltenham. This book - the perfect gift or souvenir - is for them, and for the lucky people who actually live in the area. It is also for the rest of us for whom the country idyll remains an unrealised but cherished dream.
