Your Clients Need Content - and They Expect You to Deliver! Whether you love to write, or would rather clamp your thumb in a vise and turn than write content, your clients are dependent on you to supply them with high-quality content. Content is not only king, it's the only thing standing between your client's website and invisibility. Google demands great content, and so do prospects. Writing to please both of these demanding audiences is a challenge because they always want more, and for that 'more' to be more interesting, more valuable, more engaging. You already know how to outsource many of the services you provide as a local online marketer - at a nice profit. This book will teach you how to do the same with content creation services. Outsourcing website content, blogging, press releases, newsletters, articles, ebooks, autoresponders, videos, case studies, and whitepapers to a qualified content agency gives you another profit center and gives your clients the content they so desperately need.
